THE SICK SOLDIER.

Several Recurrences of Heart Trouble Overcome.

But Each Attack Leaves Him Weaker Than Before.

Hope of Ultimate Recovery Well Nigh Abandoned.

The Distinguished Patient Very Weak at Last Accounts.

Sheridan's Illness.

WASHINGTON, May 31.—The following bulletin was issued this morning: Consultation at 8 a. m. Since the alarming occurrence noted in the bulletin issued at 12:15 a. m. General Sheridan has slowly recovered from the prostration then shown, and the pulse stronger. He has slept pretty well during the last three hours.

At ten this morning [illegible] was reported to be resting quietly, and Colonel Kelloggs said there had been no material change in his condition since the morning bulletin.

9 a. m.—General Sheridan has been [illegible] artificial aid. There has been no recurrence of severe coughing since the last bulletin, and the situation is now rather encouraging.

WASHINGTON, May 31.—A bulletin issued at 1:30 says: Since the daily morning bulletin there has been no marked change in General Sheridan's condition. [illegible] improvement. He has rested quietly [illegible] expresses himself as feeling well.

CHICAGO, May 31.—The Daily News Washington special says: While General Sheridan is more comfortable to-day and his cough somewhat better, he is still very low and in an extremely critical condition. Coughing and vomiting have disturbed the [illegible] of his lungs seems to make recovery impossible; but he keeps up his courage and endeavors to keep up the spirits of his wife and attendants.

WASHINGTON, May 31.—4:30 p. m. It was stated there has been a very slight improvement in Sheridan's condition this afternoon. Doctors are now in consultation.

8:30.—It has just been ascertained that General Sheridan had another recurrence of heart trouble this afternoon, but it is stated he is resting easy now.

8:40.—Dr. N. S. Lincoln has been called in the case, and is now in consultation with the other doctors.

WASHINGTON, May 31.—An official bulletin issued at 10 p. m. says: General Sheridan had another severe attack this afternoon. He has recovered very imperfectly, and his condition causes the greatest apprehension. At the request of Dr. O'Reilly, Dr. Pepper, professor of clinical medicine and provost of the Pennsylvania university of Pennsylvania, has been telegraphed for and will arrive here about 4 o'clock to-morrow morning.

WASHINGTON, May 31.—General Sheridan's condition has been growing worse and worse, and to-night the hope that he would be able to rally has well nigh been abandoned. There have been several recurrences of heart trouble, and each attack has apparently left him weaker than the previous one, and it is becoming more and more difficult to rally him. His breathing has become labored and heavy and the lungs are getting more and more edematous. The presence of edema has also been again noticed in the legs, and this indicates that the circulation of blood is growing more feeble. General Sheridan remains perfectly conscious and rational and suffers no pain except that arising from difficulty in breathing. The action of the heart varies constantly. Sometimes the heart will be acting with a good deal of vigor and the next moment the whole situation will be changed and its action will become fluttering and weak.

Dr. Lincoln, who was called in for consultation, said this evening: "The treatment has been successful, and I think the physicians have managed the case admirably. But for the promptness of action of those who have attended him he would have died at various times during his illness. He has been kept up so far, but it is difficult to say how much longer it can be done. It is becoming more and more difficult all the time."

WASHINGTON, June 1, 3 a. m. No perceptible change in Sheridan's condition, but he appears quite weak when awake.

Railroad Collision.

CHEYENNE, Wyo., May 31.—While a work train on the Cheyenne and Northern was repairing a washout near Bordeau, 84 miles north of here, the northbound passenger, running at full speed, collided with the engine of the work train, completing wrecking both. John Hunter, passenger conductor, John Mayfield, passenger brakeman, and Charles Reem, fireman, were instantly killed. Chris. Madsen, engineer of the work, and Engineer Brooks of the passenger, were bruised and scalded; will probably die. Several others were injured, not seriously.

France and Austria.

PARIS, May 31.—Goblet announced in the chamber of deputies that Austria had assured the French ambassador at Vienna that malevolent intention towards France must not be attributed to the speech of Von Tisza. This explanation was made in reply to an interpolation by M. Reach, who characterized Tisza's language as discourteous and contrary to international comity. Goblet said further that Count Kalnoky had expressed deep regret for the incident, and declared that neither the government nor himself intended to affront France. Austria, he said desires to maintain excellent relations between the countries. Herr Von Tisza the Hungarian prime minister, afterward disclaimed any intention to wound French feeling. In conclusion Goblet said: "We are bound to believe

The News still thinks to boom that physical wreck General Black for the vice presidency. The News, however, will not be in the way of the procession.

The Civil Service Reform league at its meeting Tuesday night, expressed considerable regret that Cleveland had not lived up to his civil service reform promises. But it is only fair to remember that he was supported by a party which has no sympathy whatever with civil service reform. It is hardly just to expect that President Cleveland should be so far in advance of his party. The fact remains, however, that his administration has kept the issue alive, and that both parties will be compelled to declare in its favor in the coming election.

Major McKinley, of Ohio, is thought to have made by far the brightest speech against the Mills bill, but even he had occasional lapses in logic. The Providence Journal in a very neat way shows up his want of logic in the following:

Let us suppose that Congressman McKinley's ten-dollar all-wool (shoddy) suit is really worth $15 in London for an equivalent sum. How, in the name of all the logicians from Aristotle down, does this prove that a high tariff is either beneficial or necessary? On the contrary, does it not show that any tariff much above the revenue point can do nothing whatever for us, and that much of our present tariff could be taken off without necessitating any lowering of the wages rate? If for example, notwithstanding the higher wages per week which the American woolen manufacturer pays his operatives, he can still produce goods so cheap that they can be made into a suit of clothes and sold for the same price as in England, then what is the tariff of 75 per cent on woolens doing for that manufacturer, anyway?

If the duty were taken off of his goods altogether he could still, on the supposition that Mr. McKinley's assertion is true, make cloth just as cheap as his English competitor, and not be forced to pay a cent less in wages.

So in the case of all other protected industries. Either a high tariff enables the home manufacturers and producers to charge higher prices or it doesn't. If it does, then for the sake of relieving an overtaxed people it ought to be reduced to the lowest possible point. If it doesn't, then there is no need of retaining any more of it than is required for the government expenses.

That is the situation in a nutshell. The high tariff men have gained nothing by shifting their position and declaring that customs duties do not raise prices. On that supposition the tariff is still more strongly resented than ever, and the tariff as a means of raising prices and putting money in the pockets of the few at the expense of the many is just enough that it does not raise prices even for the benefit of the few, then it is nothing but an absurdity.

The trouble is in trying to prove too much for protection. Protection is only to aid those engaged in the manufacture of articles which cannot be produced in this country as cheaply as they can be produced abroad. If they can be produced as cheaply, there is no need of protection; as for example, for our wheat, pork or beef. Yet some republican congressmen have tried to show that under protection some protected articles are not higher here than abroad, and yet insist that this protection should be retained in order to protect American labor. If articles are sold as cheap in this country as in England, it is difficult to see how protection is going to give the laborer better wages here than there. It is much better to look at protection just as it is. It is a tax laid upon foreign products so as to enable us to manufacture articles that we otherwise could not afford to. It is a tax laid upon the people to contribute to the support of a business that otherwise would not pay.

General John M. Palmer, the democratic candidate for governor of Illinois, has had a very remarkable career. He presided over the first republican state convention held in Illinois, and at that time was one of the only influence to new Abraham Lincoln in the organization. He took an active part in every campaign that followed, particularly in that of 1860. When the war broke out he enlisted and achieved considerable distinction, commanding during Sherman's Atlanta campaign the Fourteenth army corps. In 1869, he was nominated and elected by the republicans, governor of Ohio, and served until 1873. Since then he has held no political position. Now, at the age of seventy-one, he re-enters politics as a candidate for governor in the party which, during his earlier political career, he persistently fought. In the early history of the republican party, the issues were vital principles. While John M. Palmer was a republican, Logan, Grant and others who have been prominent in the republican party during the last twenty five years were democrats. At the time General Palmer was prominent, the republican party was pre-eminently the party of great moral ideas. Patriotism was a sentiment not then invoked, but a high law was recognized in all civil affairs. That he was a republican at that time, showed a fine fiber. The war brought a large number of others, including Logan, into the republican party through patriotic feeling. They were men of great loyalty and sterling manhood, but did not have the exact moral temperament of the men who had earlier embraced the republican cause. It is difficult to reconcile General Palmer's position then, to his position now. The only explanation that can be given is that for a number of years past the leaders of the republican party were of a very different class from those who founded it. They were not men alive to the great moral issues which gave the party birth, but looked upon the party simply as a great political organization to keep a certain clique of men in office. It is probable that General Palmer left his party because of the influence of these men. But [illegible] For while they were disenchanted with their leaders, who were fighting for spoils and office, and dropping their platforms, not to conform to what was right but to draw the most votes, still they [illegible] the fact that there was no better party for them to go to. While republicans have frequently in the last few years found their votes counted more by voting for the democratic [illegible] they cannot afford to leave the party [illegible] the democratic [illegible] main independent [illegible] with a [illegible] which shall [illegible] party that nominated Fremont in 1856. It is a sorry spectacle however at the present time to see the way in which the successors of Charles Sumner, William Pitt Fessenden, William H. Seward and Thaddeus Stevens are discussing the tariff question in the house.

A Distressing Accident.

CHICAGO, May 31.—Early this morning while David Colbert, aged 21, and his bride of two weeks were struggling playfully over the possession of a watch, Colbert pointed a revolver at his wife telling her to "stand and deliver." She struck at him, and hitting the revolver it exploded, sending a bullet into her left breast, causing death in a few minutes. Colbert was frantic with grief and endeavored to commit suicide with the same weapon. He was disarmed, however, and turned over to the police until he become calmer.

ARFIELD'S WIDOW.

HE LIVES AT MENTOR—DR. BLISS' ILLNESS.

[illegible] Sherman and Allison—something [illegible] Jennie Chamberlain, the Beauty.

[illegible] CLEVELAND, May 26.—Mrs James A. Garfield is living very quietly at Mentor. [illegible] for the two weeks she has [illegible] to stay. She will shortly take place in her [illegible] here. She will be the [illegible] of Mr. Garfield's [illegible] Mr. Stanley Brown, who will [illegible] Mr. Garfield has shown [illegible] of keeping ability [illegible] Mason, who is to be [illegible] of the Western Reserve [illegible] Garfield likes it so [illegible] she has long since decided to [illegible] and this, I am [illegible] understand [illegible] Washington house on [illegible] is the house which Garfield [illegible] when he was in congress. It is a [illegible] pressed brick, worth [illegible] on the edge of Euclid [illegible] and not far from [illegible] John Sherman.

[illegible] of Mr. Garfield calls attention [illegible] Dr Bliss, who [illegible] President A. Garfield's [illegible] falling [illegible] on the day of Garfield's assassination [illegible] and the seeds of his present trouble [illegible] sown in the care and watching [illegible] to the president's bedside [illegible] from the time Garfield was shot to [illegible] Bliss was with him almost day [illegible] He gave up a practice amounting [illegible] from $25,000 to $30,000 a year and [illegible] months lost himself out [illegible] to the government and its [illegible] He was the watchguard of [illegible] chamber, and was the moving [illegible] of the wonderful means which kept [illegible] alive for months. After his [illegible] found himself broken down. He [illegible] to take a vacation, and he [illegible] at the end of six months somewhat [illegible] He soon failed again, however [illegible] to attend to his practice, and [illegible] that instead of being the [illegible] doctor of the capital, and the [illegible] of an income of $20,000 a [illegible] is poor and his health is broken. [illegible] presidential talk [illegible] Senator Sherman's name [illegible] last week. It is a curious [illegible] Sherman, the [illegible] presidential candidate [illegible] practically brought up together [illegible] and studied law at the [illegible] first days of practice [illegible] fifteen miles apart. [illegible] settled first at Ashland [illegible] began to practice law at [illegible] his brother, Charley Sherman [illegible] and Mansfield are the [illegible] two adjoining counties [illegible] fourteen miles over a hilly road from one to the other. The leading lawyers of the district practice in both counties. John Sherman's first business was largely a collective business, and I imagine that Allison's work was more before the courts. Allison married his first wife in Mansfield, and Mrs. Sherman is a Mansfield girl. It was just about the time that Sherman was elected to congress, perhaps a little later, that young Allison came out to the new state of Iowa and the backs of the two statesmen met for a time again. Allison made a reputation in Iowa and went to congress. He used Sherman at Washington in the senate, and later the two had seats so near together as when they tried the opposite sides of cases before the common pleas in Ohio of northern Ohio.

Allison has now given up all connection with Ohio. I think he does not own any property outside of Iowa and Washington. He is now a rich man, and that the nation knows. Sherman has stuck to Mansfield, and his property has grown in value. He has one of the finest country seats in Ohio, and he lately remodeled his house at Mansfield. [illegible] and remodelling consisted with transforming [illegible] of a gigantic size. This Sherman [illegible] Cleveland, on the [illegible] United States [illegible] Garfield is a very [illegible] Garfield likes it so [illegible] decided to [illegible] and this, I am [illegible] understand [illegible] Washington house on [illegible] is the house which Garfield [illegible] when he was in congress. styles; and the [illegible] is [illegible] new that she will not by a few deft touches exaggerate and thus [illegible] it. If it is what is dear to her heart. If she can only walk along the street feeling that she is creating a sensation, she cares little who rules in Rome, or who is nominated for president. To carry a pug, a cat or any other animal, to decorate herself with any kind of quadruped or biped, is as a balm to her heart. If such an exhibition only causes her to be observed, with envy, with scorn, anger or amusement; and she cares not only so she gets the notice. She would just as lief have the disagreeable regards thrown at her by her own sex as the admiration of the other; for both are caused by the one reason—notice of her courage in the way of making herself remarkable.

If I were to be let down in a desert and [illegible] were to pass in review before me I could pick them out and name them [illegible] from their different styles. Philadelphia women have a neat, dainty trimness about them, and a quiet style of dress as refined as pretty, and it shows plainly the Quaker element which has entered into the minds of its generation of girls. St. Louis ladies have a certain soft and lasting grace in their dress, which takes on their own warm-hearted fullness and look of primness, just graceful and comfortable and rich. Chicago girls are more prim than those last mentioned, and they go in for the richest materials and most costly goods without adapting them to their individuality, and they have the air of being usually overdressed. Still, the handsome faces go far to redeem the mistake. Baltimore girls do not seem to be dressed at all, as far as remembering what they have on, but the ensemble is so perfect that one has but a confused idea of beautiful eyes, lovely faces and a general air of harmony in everything, which is as pleasing to the eye as to the sense of fitness. The Boston girl, oh, dear! Those who don't dress out of the dusty leaves of old science books as if they had fed all their lives on the undersoil of pumpkin pie, and those who study hard or have dyspepsia don't bother much over their dress.

ANNIE RUSSELL (ELAINE) ON THE STREET.

But the New York girl is a little of every style—something of the French, a good bit of the English—and all this embellished by that chic peculiarly her own. Wherever she is she carries everything her own way by sheer force of an insolent courage born of her self knowledge, which is a little staggering, and that is just what she wants; to stagger, surprise, bewilder and conquer. The latest streak is to show her superlative knowledge of bric-a-brac, of old paintings, and at the same time appear to be shortsighted. It is very instructive to watch her in an art gallery with her long handled glasses plant herself deliberately in front of some picture or statue, which has been overlooked by the good St Antony, and see her lift those glasses and then grow red while she stands there a martyr to her own folly, for she does not dare to leave the spot too soon. Ah, well, let them alone, these New York girls; they can't help it.

The [illegible] and the most pronounced of poke bonnets. Some of them have gold and jeweled handles, some are plain, and some are of mother-of-pearl. Mrs Robert Garrett, wife of the Baltimore millionaire, has her's of gold with gold rimmed glasses. Some have only one glass, and that a big round one, which is chiefly useful when one wants to cut an acquaintance. A cold stare through this would chill the warmest sentiment.

[illegible] in a simplicity and quiet taste. A costume lately worn by her and pronounced heresy of all gray camel's hair, in ruffed stripes of two shades and plain goods. With this she wears a basque of the darker shade with a white pique vest [illegible] with pink pink apple blossoms altogether charming.

For a [illegible] sensible and useful hat, exactly adapted for [illegible] what it is designed for, commend me to the yachting hat portrayed elsewhere. It is made of shirred [illegible] a wire frame, and is trimmed with an amazing array of ribbons and curled plumes, all of which are particularly perishable under the influence of salt sea spray; and yet this is an exact copy of Mrs George Gould's hat which she wore on her recent trips. Such a hat as this would be pretty for a young girl in the country, where she was sure of sunny weather. [illegible] with the wintresses of the Pittsburg women as a proof of wealth. None but millionaires could afford such for yachting.

Among the oddities of the new millinery are the flowers for the bonnets. They are made in the most exaggerated sizes. There are pansies four to six inches long, so large, indeed, that one is all that can be placed upon a single bonnet, in addition to the other trimmings. They are made of velvet and satin and are very perfect though so large. Many very pretty bonnets are made of a new black [illegible] which is [illegible] of a yard wide, and which is soft, silky and flexible, and not expensive. This lace is gathered full over a frame and with flowers makes a stylish bonnet. Anybody can make such a bonnet who can sew at all.

New toilet accessories are also unusually simple and pretty, and we show a few designs that our intelligent readers will adopt at once, I am sure. It is just by means of such dainty trifles that distinguishing grace and feminine delicacy can be added to any toilet, however plain in itself.

New summer gloves are in silk of light colors and with heavy stitching on the back. There will be wool mitts as for the last few summers, of ecru and tan shades of raw silk. I wonder if those who wear these convenient mitts know how much the girls get who make them? They receive five cents for making twelve pairs. They are given the goods in the piece, but with the pattern stamped upon it, and they have to cut out their own work, and fit the thumbs of each in, and run the heavy stitching upon the back of the hands. It is very difficult to cut out the material, as it is so soft and stretchy. A girl, by hard work, can make about a gross of these mitts a day, making sixty cents, and we pay from thirty-five cents to $1 for the mitts when we buy them. It is easier to be a millionaire than to earn one's living.

OLIVE HARPER.

Architect Frank T. Lent has made drawings and specifications for the alterations and additions necessary for the new Exchange National bank, corner of Pike's Peak avenue and Tejon street. The bank rooms will be 22 feet wide by 61 feet deep, with a large and heavy fire and burglar proof vault. The bank proper will be fitted with antique oak counters, wainscot, etc and ornamental wire iron work screens. It will have rough cast and painted walls and tile floor. The tee plant room and directors' room will be fitted up in a manner tasteful manner. The bank work will cost approximately $6,000. W. L. Andrews & Co of Chicago will furnish all the hard wood fittings, and the work here will be done by W. R. Roby.

BASE BALL.

Colorado Springs Defeated by a Denver Aggregation.

The base ball game yesterday afternoon between a Denver aggregation [illegible] was an exhibition of ball [illegible] The players of the [illegible] hope they will not again [illegible] The Denver [illegible] were the strongest that could be [illegible] and [illegible] most of the players were fan out of the members of the home club. The Denver club not quite reminded the best amateur interest in the game. But was strengthened by [illegible] and Maybelle, who are [illegible] players. A defeat at the hands of such a club would have been no disgrace. But the local club [illegible] and some of the nine the game ignominiously by throwing it away the [illegible] by indulgent fielding errors.

[illegible] the game [illegible] nothing in favor of the home club. Victory was almost assured, the game promised to be the finest of the season. Ferguson who was in the box for the local club was [illegible] with batting with the [illegible] and even runs [illegible] manner. As soon as the ball had been hit a few times the leaders of the home club lost their heads and the game. In the seventh and eighth innings the visitors made nine runs, four of which were presented to them through glaring errors of Goddard, F. McMahon and Fitzgerald.

Goddard particularly was away off in his playing and fully demonstrated his inability to hold down second base. Ferguson pitched a good game up to the sixth inning when he weakened. Every one of the visitors hit him hard in the concluding three innings. But had he been well supported the result would have been different. Castone, on the other hand, was very effective and struck out eighteen men. His support was good after the fourth inning. The batting of the Denver club was heavy and they were able to bunch their hits at critical periods of the game. The back stop work of W. J. McMahon was par excellence. [illegible] a great measure, the credit of keeping the visitors score within moderate limits. "Red" has established himself as a firm favorite in the estimation of local base ball enthusiasts.

De Witt played a good game at short, as did Willoughby at second for the visitors.

The managers of the local club must strengthen their nine if they desire a liberal local patronage. The last two games have fully demonstrated where these changes should be made. Colorado Springs wants a club that can play winning ball; the "chumps" must play in some other club. The umpiring of Mr. Ferrin yesterday was not satisfactory, and there is considerable room for improvement. The score for yesterday's game is as follows:

The Phoenix Literary society of Colorado college gave its annual exhibition in the college chapel last evening in the presence of an audience which taxed the capacity of the room. The programme, as previously published, was carried out in a very pleasing and acceptable manner. The feature of the evening was the presentation of W. D. Howells' farce, entitled "The Garroters." The platform, at the northern end of the room, was converted into a neat stage, the settings of which were arranged in an admirable manner. The leading characters of the part were well taken by Misses Nellie Kerr and Laura Wickard and by Messrs. Farwell Bemis, F. L. Sherwin and H. M. Blackburn, while the minor parts were well sustained by Misses Cameron and Pattison, and Messrs Kingsley and Kirkwood.

Shooting Scrape at Eastonville

Yesterday morning a telegram was received from Eastonville to the effect that two negroes had engaged in a scrimmage near Eastonville in which both were wounded. Owing to the meagre facilities for getting information from the place but little could be learned regarding the affair. It was, however, ascertained that the names of the parties were Charles Chapman and Peter Baker, both of whom are well known among the colored people of this city. The trouble grew out of a dispute about a claim which Chapman was about to or had located in the vicinity of Baker's ranch. It is reported that the two men had a regular duel with shot guns loaded with bird shot. Chapman, who was the worst injured of the two received two charges of the shot in the [illegible] by one charge. The wounded men are now at Eastonville and it is not known if any arrests have been made. Chapman has been an employee at the gas works in this city and has always borne a bad reputation. A few weeks ago it will be remembered that he assaulted and shot at a colored man named Martin near the Santa Fe depot, and was shot by Martin in the leg. Baker achieved some notoriety about a week ago by assaulting a colored woman in this city for which he was fined by Justice of the Peace Shideler.

Sale of the Cattle Trust.

Chicago, May 31.—A transaction, which, from its magnitude and for its reversal of the usual order of things, is decidedly interesting, was consummated to-day. The parties to it are the American cattle trust and Nelson Morris, the Chicago live stock magnate. Instead of the gobbling up process by a trust the exact opposite is the case. Morris has bought back from the cattle trust the Fairbank Canning company and has satisfactorily dissolved all relations with the trust. The consideration was $1,000,000.

Racing at St. Louis.

St. Louis, May 31.—Weather cool, track fair.

Threequarters of a mile—Autocrat won, Carmelite second, Unknown third; time 1.15.

Mile heats—Elgin won the first heat, Fosteral second, Irish Pat third; time 1.44. Irish Pat won the second heat, Elgin second, War Sign third; time 1.45¼. Elgin won the third heat and the race, Irish Pat second; time 1.45¼.

Real Estate stakes, six furlongs—Liberty won, Isabella second, So So third; time 1.16¼.

Handicap, mile and a half—Unique won, Whooo second, White Nose third; time 2.38.

Steeplechase, full course—Winslow won, Liboro second, Bucephalus third; time 3.49½.

A Firm in Discord.

Chicago, May 31.—Clarence A. and Emory Warner, residents of Los Angeles, Cal., and [illegible] of the firm of Warner Bros. & Crosby, California excursion agents, filed a bill in the circuit court this morning asking for dissolution of co-partnership and for an accounting. The Warners have charge of the Pacific slope end of the business while Joseph B. Crosby, the defendant, represents the firm's interest in the eastern and middle states. They have transacted a large business and might have made much greater profits had Crosby properly attended to the business. It is claimed that Crosby [illegible] the business at least $10,000 and used several hundred dollars of the firm's money for which he never accounted.

"The Paymaster" at the opera house this evening.

There will be a regular meeting of the Board of trade this evening.

Remember the excellent concert at the First Presbyterian church to-night.

The Odd Fellows of the city had a very pleasant excursion on Manitou land yesterday.

A chain gang of eleven prisoners was at work on the streets yesterday under the supervision of the police.

Miss Persie W. Ayer has returned to the city from Niagara Falls, New York, and will make a brief visit here.

A boy having a horse can secure a permanent job by calling on [illegible] today between 11 and 1 o'clock.

Hon. Smith M. Weed, a prominent democratic politician of New York, is stopping at the Cliff house, Manitou.

The police magistrate fined four men for drunkenness, three men for vagrancy and three men for disturbing the peace.

There will be a game of base ball on the grounds to-morrow afternoon between Ashby's Giants (colored) and the Browns.

Mrs. Grace D. Levering who was heard some months ago in Colorado Springs will sing several exquisite selections at the concert to-night.

The closing entertainment at the deaf mute institute will take place on next Tuesday afternoon, at half past two o'clock, instead of on Wednesday afternoon, as previously announced.

Mr. Samuel Alsop Jr., formerly a resident of Colorado Springs, died in Denver yesterday. He will be buried in Evergreen to-morrow. He has a number of warm personal friends in the city.

Dr. J. H. Gower recently from England is one of the best organists and composers in England. We shall have an interesting sonata for cello and piano composed by Dr. [illegible] played by Mr. Winkler, at the concert to-night.

On next Thursday evening the spelling exhibition of drawings and models made by the children in the public schools takes place at the high school building. Admission on that evening is by invitation. The general public will be admitted on Friday and Saturday.

The right of way privileges for the Rock Island railroad has nearly all been secured in this county with comparatively little trouble. Only four condemnation suits will have to be brought. Mr. John Campbell will look after the interests of the railroad in the trial of these suits.

Mr. J. H. Cragg, manager of the Labor opera house in Leadville, writes Manager Nye that "The Paymaster" is a strong play and that they have some of the finest scenery that has ever been used in his house. Our theater going people should not fail to attend the performance at the opera house this evening.

The normal temperature in May at Colorado Springs from eleven years' records is 55.3; the mean temperature for May, 1888, is 52.4, a deficiency for the mean monthly temperature of 2.9 degrees. The normal precipitation for the same period is 2.51 inches; for May, 1888, 2.42 inches, an excess above the normal of .11 inch.

The final examinations in the public schools commence this afternoon. The schools close for the summer vacation on June 8th. The fall term commences September 3rd. The following is the programme of the examinations:

Friday afternoon—All grades: Physiology and hygiene.

Monday morning—Grade 8, grammar, grades 2, 4, 5, 6 and 7, geography.

Tuesday morning—Grade 8, U. S. history; grades 2, 3, 4, 5, 6 and 7, language.

Wednesday morning—All grades, Arithmetic.

Thursday morning—All grades, Spelling.

All pupils assemble at 2 p. m. to receive reports and announcement of promotions.

[illegible] who is a lover of nature, every one who is fond of boating and athletic sports; every one who desires a day of rest and recreation should attend the College House Co's excursion to-morrow. The train will leave the D. & R. G. depot at 8:30, bound for the most charming resort in the county. As it is but a short run to Palmer Lake there will be none of that tiresomeness on the train which is characteristic of excursions to farther points. The races which have been described in the hand bills will come off during the forenoon, leaving the entire time after lunch for every one to enjoy as they prefer. The entire grounds have been secured by the company and will be rented at low figures for the whole day. The people should come to see the interest manifested in the excursion by their friends and will return leaving nothing undone which will add to their comfort and pleasure.

"The Paymaster," a sensational military comedy melodrama, [illegible] be produced at the opera house this evening by Harrison and Rogers' company. On Saturday evening the company will appear in Dion Boucicault's romantic Irish drama, "My Geraldine." The company [illegible] of the most [illegible] day called "Commodore Nutt." The play has much [illegible] attraction is undoubtedly the [illegible] the acting and stage [illegible] and fourth acts. The [illegible] master from the prison and the [illegible] Ethel Raley from the lake [illegible] Daddy [illegible]

[illegible] are extremely well done, and the scenery of the lake, with the bridge and village water in the back ground, is very nearly perfection. If we are to have vaudeville it could not be more acceptably given us, and the management of this company deserves [illegible] doubtedly gain. The [illegible]

[illegible] Hardware, Pocket Cutlery, Wooden and Hollow Ware, Building and Anvil, Window Shades, Poles and Irons, Screws, Jap Japanned Tin Ware, [illegible] of the latest and best styles to be had in the Grand Rapids, Chicago, [illegible] Manufacturers and Importers.

STRANGERS, and others not posted in our Real Estate Market, often ask the question, "Where can I best invest my money to be sure of Quick and Profitable returns?"

1st. I would say, select a locality where you have the most SUNSHINE, the finest view of our GRAND MOUNTAIN SCENERY, etc.

2nd. See that you locate where you can enjoy the best WATER ADVANTAGES that our city affords. A home without water in this country is a desert, and when I say "BEST WATER ADVANTAGES" I mean not only for irrigating purposes, which is very important, but also for its DOMESTIC PURPOSES. Our water supply at present is limited, and unless greatly increased the time is not far off when every drop will be needed inside present city limits.

3rd. Do not locate where lots are low or wet. Low priced lots in such localities are DEAR AT ANY MONEY, and will never sell for half its value. Better [illegible] other ways not equally bad that will increase in value.

4th. Don't wait until the "Rock Island" comes in and then pay 25 per cent more than present prices.

5th. Lastly, call and see us and we will convince you that BOULDER HEIGHTS, for purposes, all the above advantages.
